

Technology Tools: Facebook

If Facebook was a country, it would be the second largest nation in the world. With usage growing hourly, it's a tool that your worship group or meeting might want to use. It's free and has a variety of benefits.

Your group can set up a Page. Pages can be visited and viewed by any Facebook member and can display links, photos, events, documents and invite responses to surveys. You can even buy ads on Facebook directing people to your Page – and you can target the people you'd like to see the ad (for example: who live with 25 miles of your zip code, are interested in spirituality, etc).

Things you can do on a Facebook Page include:

- Feature a map to your meeting place.
- Have all relevant contact information – including times of regularly schedule events such as meeting for worship.
- Post meetings for worship and other gatherings (special speakers, Quaker Quest, and so forth). You can then invite Facebook friends to these events and/or publicize them via Facebook ads.
- Use the status update to keep Facebookers apprised of work in which your group is involved. This includes community vigils, soup dinners, volunteer efforts, etc.
- Post links of interest from related organizations such as your yearly meeting, local food pantry, American Friends Service Committee and so on.
- Use photos to showcase your group's activities.
- Post videos about your group or which relate to your group's interests.
