Dear Piper,

As we await the first crisp hints of fall, it's delightful to anticipate the good books we'll curl up with as the days get colder. In this BookMusings for the beginning of fall you'll find a book review from Ellen Michaud, books providing a Quaker perspective on education, and a promotion for upcoming reading event at Pendle Hill. Check it out!

In the Light,
Samantha Wilson and Marta Rusek, bookstore managers

- Quaker Classic

Ellen's Review Corner: Le Flambeau School of Driving

One moment with Peggy Senger Morrison—Quaker pastor, author, therapist, motorcycle enthusiast, mother, grandmother and founder of Oregon's Freedom Friends' Church—and the myth among non-Friends that Quaker women are quiet, gentle little creatures who go quietly into the night will be shattered forever.

Quaker views on Education

As school starts up for the fall, here are some books of Quaker thought on education, resources for teachers, essays on education systems, helpful books for parents, and resources for First Day Schools.

See the list here.

Quaker classics: The Political Writings of William Penn

This large selection of Penn's writings is especially timely given all that's going on in our world and politics. What's different from Penn's time and our own? Read and explore. Part 1 focuses on liberty and religious toleration; Part 2 addresses general arguments to specific events in British politics; and Part 3 presents the essay "toward the present and future peace of Europe."
